BOSER WILLIAMS ... SEARCH FOR HIS RE-

DENT. Ninety years after the death of Roger Williams in 1771, steps were taken to erect some suitable monument, but the storms of the Revolution came on and the work was forgotten. But recently the question has been agitated anew, and Williams may yet at least have some outward sign to mark his a period of 183 years, not even a rough stone cality of his grave had been almost forgotten, and could only be ascertained after the most careful investigation. Suffice it to say, however, the spot was found and the exhumation made a short time ago-though there was little to exhume. On scraping off the turf from the surface of the ground the dim outlines of seven graves, contained within less than one square rod, revealed the burial ground of Roger Williams. In colonial times ecah family had its own burial ground, which was usually near the family residence. Three of these seven graves were those of children, the remainding four were adults. The easterly grave was identified as that of Mr. Williams. On digging down into the "charnel house," it was found that everything had passed into oblivion. The shapes of the coffins could only be traced by a black line of carbonaceous matter the thickness of the edges of the sides of the coffins, with their ends distinctly defined. The rusted remains of the hinges and nails, with a few fragments of wood and a single round knot, were all that could be gathered from his grave. In the grave of his wife there was not a trace of anything save a single lock of braided hair which had survived the lapse of more than 180 years. Near the grave stood a venerable apple tree, when and by whom planted is not known. This tree had sent two of its main roots in to the graves of Mr. and Mrs. Williams. The larger root had pushed its way through the earth till it reached the precise spot occupied by the skull of Roger Williams. There making a turn as if going round the skull, it followed the direction of the backbone to the hips. Here it divided into two brunches, sending one along each leg to the heel, where they both turned upward to the toes. One of these roots formed a slight crook at the knee, which makes the whole bear a very close resemblance to a human form. This singular root is preserved with great care, not only as an illustration of a great principle in vegetation, but as a great historic association. There were the graves, emptied of every particle of human dust Not a trace of anything was left! It is known to chemistry that all flesh, and the gelantinous matter giving consistency to the bones, are resolved into carbonic acid gas, water and air, while the solid lime dust usually remains. But in this instance even the phosphate of lime of the bones of both graves was all gone! There stood the "guilty apple tree," as was said at the time "caught in the very act of robbing the grave."

To explain the phenomenon is not the design of this article. Such an explanation could be given, and many other similar cases adduced. But this fact must be admitted : the organic matter of Roger Williams had been transmitted into the apple tree; it had passed into the woody fiber and was capa-ble of propelling a steam engine; it had bloomed in the apple blossoms, and had become pleasant to the eye; and more, it had gone into the fruit from year to year, so that the question might be asked, Who ate Roger Williams ?-Hartford Press.

Indian Summer.-There are days which occur in this climate, at almost any season of the year, wherein the world reaches its perfection, when the air, the heavenly bodies, ment. and the earth make a harmony, as if nature would indulge her offspring; when, in these bleak upper sides of the planet, nothing is to desire that we have heard of the happiest next spring. latitudes, and we bask in the shining hours of Florida and Cuba; when everything that has life gives sign of satisfaction, and the cattle that lie on the ground seem to have great and tranquil thoughts. These halcyons may be looked for with a little more assurance in that pure October weather, which we distinguish by the name of Indian Summer .-The day immeasurably long, sleeps over the broad hills and warm wide fields. To have lived through all its sunny hours seems longevity enough. The solitary places do not seem quite lonely. At the gates of the forest the surprised man of the world is forced to leave his city estimates of great and small, wise and foolish. We creep out of our close and crowded houses into the night and morning, and we see what majestic beauties not the human senses room enough. We go out daily and nightly to feed the eyes on the horizon, and require so much scope, just as we need water for our bath. * There is the bucket of cold water from the spring, the woodfire to which the chilled traveler rushes for safety-and there is the sublime moral of autumn and of noon.

THE DOG DOCTOR'S SECRET .- Good food, dainties, and want of exercise, are the destruction of parlor dogs. They become fat with increasing age, and contract various diseases. At last the day comes when a dose of prussic acid must finish the business, or that a medical practitioner must be called in. who will by a severe regimen restore the dog's health and appetite. An ex-kennel man in our neighborhood made a very confortable income by this peculiar line of practice. He divulged the secret of his system a few days before his dissolution to the cstimable clergyman of the parish. "I always tied 'em," said this canine Abernethy, "to a crab tree at the end of my garden, for a but water .week, and gave 'em nothing When I fetched them from their mistresses, they refused to eat what I should have been glad to get, and when they went back they would eat what I couldn't have touched .-I've had some dogs twice or even three times a year, but I always cured 'em at last. One of them was as good as three pounds a year to me. I was terrible fond of him, but he never took to me; and when he saw me coming for him to bring down his fat, he would waddle away, and howl enough to wake the dead. STRANGE FREAK OF A LUNATIC .- A Ter-MAINS-HIS BODY ABSORBED BY THE rible Ride on a Locomotice.—A Centralia (III.)

ROOTS OF A TREE-A CURIOUS INCI--At 4 o'clock this morning a yard master in the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad at this place saw a man on an engine that had steam up standing on the track ready to go out. The yard master told him to get off the engine. The man replied by knocking down the yard master, running the engine out on the main track and starting northward at a terrific rate of speed. A greatness and perpetuate his name. During brakeman and fireman were lying asleep on the engine when it started. They awoke to has been set up to mark the grave of the founder of Rhode Island, till the precise lospeed of the wind, and a stranger at the engine. On examination they found him to be a drunken stone mason of this place named Fitzpatrick, who has been raving with delirium tremens recently. The two men were at first appalled with terror. They appealed to the madman to stop, but he heeded them. not, and drove the engine faster and faster. He sounded the whistle at Central City, the first station north, but did not for a moment decrease the frightful velocity of the engine. At the junction just above Central City, the whistle shricked again, and the engine sped like a cannon ball toward Sandoval. The situation was now becoming fearfully perilous, when the brakeman seized a piece of coal and hurled it at the desperate maniac. He then left the engine and turned upon the brakeman and fireman. One of them struck him with a sledge hammer, and after a struggle he was secured. The engine was speedily reversed and brought back to this city.

Preparations for the great French exhibition are noticed by a Paris correspondent as follows: The huge palace destined to contain the wonderful gathering of next year is being rapidly brought into existence. Every week or two we are informed of some new "feature" struck out by the Emperor and those about him, and destined to add to the glory of the affair. A vast and beautiful park is to surround the palace; restaurants, cafes, reading-rooms, baths, horticultural and zoological exhibitions, workshops in full activity, specimens of outlandish tribes, a guilotine (invented by a Prussian, under the inspiration, probably, of the needle-gun) that will chop off six heads per second, new quays, bridges and steamboats to facilitate coming and going, and a circular railway around the town for the same purpose, are among the projects to be executed between this and next May. It is calculated that the glass employed in this great undertaking will cover twenty square acres, and that a youth remaining in the palace long enough to study thoroughly all its contents, would only quit the Tuileries a grey-haired man.

DEPTH OF QUIET PEOPLE.—Some men dawn upon you like the Alps. They imoress you vaguely, at first, just as do the nundred faces you meet in your daily walks. They come across your horizon like floating clouds, and you have to watch a while before you see they are mountains. Some men remind you of quiet lakes, places such as you have often napped upon, where the green turf and the field flowers hung over you and are reffected out of the water all day ong Some day or other you carelessly drop a line into the clear depths, close to the daisies and dafodils, and it goes down, down, down. You lean over, the sound is deeper, but your line dosen't bring up. What a deep spot that is ! you think, and try another. The reflected daises seem to smile at you out of the water, the turf looks as green as ever, but your quiet lake is all around unfathomable. You are none the less impressed with the fact that it is a quict lake.
